Forests cover about 30% of Earth’s land surface. As much as 45% of the carbon stored on land is tied up in forests.

Forest plants are vulnerable to nonnative pests and diseases, which are most frequently introduced through trade and travel.

By detecting and reporting suspect pests, you can reduce their environmental impacts and protect our forests and our planet.

You can help protect our forests.